Some Kitsch, Camp and Fun to Add to Your Holiday To-Do List

By Eva M. Lucero, Executive Director quirky neighborhood delights. With the power of social media and proliferation of selfie photos, the internet is full of pictures of tourists posing at the infamous stairs in Georgetown from the movie, The Exorcist, the Big Chair in Anacostia, the performer Prince's purple call box and the awkward Emancipation Memorial, a statue of a chained slave kneeling at Abe Lincoln's feet on Capitol Hill. One of my personal favorites, The Barbie Pond on Avenue Q, is an offbeat attraction that is suddenly drawing visitors from around the world to our neighborhood.

The Barbie Pond is situated between Dupont Circle and Logan Circle in the front yard of a home at 1454 Q Street NW. It is a kitschy collection of Barbie and Ken dolls who commemorate every holiday dressed (or not) in celebratory garb and are neatly displayed on complete and impressive set designs. Depending on when you visit, you could find the Barbies dressed as pilgrims for Thanksgiving, drinking margaritas on Cinco De Mayo, flying on broomsticks on Halloween, dancing on a rainbow float during PRIDE, decked out in tuxedoes and ball gowns during the Presidential Inauguration, or donning nothing but shamrock fig leaves for St. Patrick's day. Staying true to their Washington roots, the dolls don't shy away from politics either. During the recent midterm elections, the Barbies reminded everyone to vote and included Barbie and Ken on the ballot. Another recent tableau re-created Melania Trump's "I Really Don't Care, Do U?" jacket and another one had the dolls holding signs that read "Barbies not Bullets."

Live and Learn: Two Great Ideas That DCV Combines

The Barbies aren't always on Q Street. This summer, they shared with their fans a series called "Barbies on Vacay" and their summer vacation desof topics. Most of the seminars are "sold out" (the seminars are free, of course).

Members of DCV consistently rank the Live and Learn seminars as a top benefit of membership. Our members appreciate the depth and breadth of the seminar topics. Just in 2018, the Live and Learn events have included:

- Financial topics such as tax savings under the new tax law, financial planning for later years, and daily money management.
- Health care topics like the annual Medicare review, osteoporosis, and living with Parkinson's.
- General information about staying safe online, decluttering, being a savvy senior traveler, and navigating the new public library.

The Live and Learn seminars are arranged by the hard-working Live and Learn Committee under its chair, Beth Merricks. Each of the seminars has two main components that the Committee handles. One is determining a topic and finding a speaker on the topic. The second is finding a location for the seminar.

The speakers are asked to appear for free. Most of the locations are ones that allow us to use the space without cost. As you can imagine, finding both of those requires some effort by the Committee members.

The Live and Learn Committee can use new members to help with both of these tasks. The time commitment is spread over the year and can be as little as a couple of hours a month. If you are interested in helping the Live and Learn Committee, please contact either Beth Merricks or Eva Lucero. I am sure that you would find participating in the Committee a learning experience.

tinations were posted on social media, mainly on their Instagram account. They could be seen on the dunes in Provincetown, eating French fries on the Boardwalk in Rehoboth Beach, posing with Mounties in Montreal, and lounging on the beach in Mexico.

Who is responsible for creating this wonderful and whimsical neighborhood delight? According to many sources, the artist/owner of the pond wishes to remain anonymous and declines most interviews. What we do know is that he and two of his friends have regular creative consultations to determine and assemble new pond themes.

Much of the success of The Barbie Pond on Avenue Q is due to its Instagram account. With a following of over 12,000 people, the site has regular photo updates and boasts of "bringing Logan Circle property values down since 2014." Many people love the elaborate installations and recently a neighbor who was about to move away left the gift of a Barbie and Ken set and a note that read "After 8+ years in this neighborhood I'm moving out of D.C. I wanted to leave you with a little something to say thank you for all of the joy you have brought me." Check it out and send us a selfie for the next newsletter.

Live & Learn: Falls Prevention

Monday, December 3, 3:30-5:00 pm Church of the Pilgrims, 2201 P St. NW (wheelchair accessible) RSVP: Register at DCV's online calendar, or contact office at (202) 436-5252

According to the National Council on Aging (NCOA), falls are the most common cause of injuries and hospital admissions for trauma. An older adult is treated in the emergency room for a fall every 11 seconds. More than one third of adults aged 65 and older, and one in two over the age of eighty, fall each year. What actions can you take to reduce the likelihood that you will be injured by a fall?

At Dupont Circle Village's December Live & Learn Seminar, Helaina Roisman, LICSW, the Injury Prevention and Outreach Coordinator at The George Washington University Hospital, and Sophia Janson, a board certified Geriatric Physical Therapist, will discuss practical tips and exercises to prevent falls, and community resources. Ms. Roisman taught the Dupont Circle Village's multiweek Falls Prevention class in 2017. Attendees will receive free exercise bands.

Live & Learn

f you could give us only one piece of advice about Medicare, what would it be?" someone asked at a Village Live and Learn Seminar about Medicare on October 22.

"Make sure that you have Medicare Part A," the speaker, Cheryl Smith,

—By Joan Treichel

replied. Smith is acting director of the Health Insurance

Counseling Project of George Washington University Law School and a Medicare expert.

Why is Medicare Part A so vital? Because it helps cover inpatient hospital costs, short-term stays in a nursing facility, home health care, and hospice care that could possibly wipe you out financially if you didn't have Medicare Part A, Smith explained. Moreover, you usually don't have to pay a monthly premium for Part A if you or your spouse paid Medicare taxes while working for a certain amount of time.

Medicare Part B is very valuable too, of course, Smith pointed out. It helps pay for doctor services both in and out of the hospital, home health services, mental health services, a number of preventive services, durable medical equipment, ambulance transport, and some other medical services. You need to pay a monthly premium for Part B coverage. The standard Part B monthly premium, as of 2018, is $134.

You can also purchase a Medigap policy to help pay for Medicare A and B-approved services that are not totally reimbursed by Medicare A and B, she noted. Some of these policies likewise cover a few things that Medicare A and B would not pay for at all – say, medical care while traveling outside the United States. Generally Medigap policies do not cover dental care, eyeglasses, hearing aids, long-term nursing home care, or private-duty nursing.

Finally, you can purchase a Medicare Part D plan to help pay for your prescription medications. Not all Part D plans cover the same medications. So you'll want to select one that is appropriate for your needs. Most drug plans charge a monthly fee that varies by plan.

> Seniors are being issued a new Medicare Part A and B card that does not have their Social Security number on it, but rather another number, in order to reduce the danger of identity theft, Smith continued. The District of Columbia has been one of the first areas in the United States to mail the new Medicare cards to seniors. If you have already received yours and have already discarded your old Medicare card, it probably isn't going to matter. But if you still have your old card, it would be a good idea to keep it for various reasons. For instance, if a keystroke error were made during the typing of your new Medicare card number, you would still have the old Medicare card with your Social Security number on it to straighten things out.

Smith also reported that seniors with limited income may possibly qualify for financial help with Medicare Part A and Part B monthly premiums, deductibles, and copayments through something called the Qualified Medicare Beneficiary Program. To qualify for this program, a senior must be a D.C. resident and have a monthly income under $3,055. Minimum required distributions taken from pension money annually rather than monthly are not included in the $3,055.

Smith likewise offered the audience a few more Medicare tips. For instance, nearly all hospitals accept Medicare as payment. But that doesn't necessarily mean that all the physicians, nurses, and physical and occupational therapists working there do. So if you are going to a hospital for an elective surgical procedure, ask the hospital surgical coordinator ahead of time whether not only your surgeon, but also your anesthesiologist and other clinical staff participate in Medicare.

Vastly more information about negotiating the Medicare maze can be found in the Medicare & You 2019 booklet that all of us seniors should have received in the mail. If anyone has specific Medicare questions, they can contact Smith by calling (202) 994-6272 or by e-mailing her at casmith2@law.gwu.edu.

Peace of Mind for You and Your Loved Ones

What is a smartphone? It's a cell phone that, in addition to phone calls and texting, also has internet access and various apps.

By Ann Talty

What are apps? The word is short for applications basically computer programming for specific functions. How do I get an app? If you have an Apple product (iPhone), there should be a pre-loaded app that takes you to Apple's app store. For an Android (Samsung, LG, etc.), you would go to the GooglePlay store app.

Are apps free? Some are. Some will say they are free, but there are in app purchases available. For those listed below, the app is free, but the service you request must be paid for.

Why would I want an app? There are some that can help keep you self-sufficient.

Grocery apps: Order groceries to be delivered. Perhaps just heavy and bulky items. There is a small delivery fee, and a minimum order. If you have a Safeway card or a Giant card (Peapod), you will receive your usual discount. Pick a delivery time, which may have a dis-counted fee or be free. Harris Teeter doesn't have this service in this area. Whole Foods can be ordered using Amazon Prime Pantry.

Delivery from restaurants: the two main apps are Grubhub and UberEats. Is it raining or snowy? Or you just have a hankering for something and don't feel like going out to get it? Get the apps and see what restaurants, categories of food can be delivered to you, look at their menu and order.

Ride service: the main ones are Uber and Lyft. You can use your phone to take you somewhere, get you home if stranded or can only get transportation one way. The app locates where you are, and just needs to know where you are going. Little cars will appear on the screen, and once selected, you can watch the progress of the car. You know immediately what it will cost, the make of the car, license plate and driver's name. The ride is charged automatically, so you don't need to fumble with cash or credit card before you get out. This gives great peace of mind!

Isn't this expensive? It can be, but you don't need to spend a fortune. Perhaps a family member could give you the phone for Christmas or birthday. You probably see ads in AARP materials about two services - Consumer Cellular (5% discount for AARP members) and Jitterbug. Both have low fees, and no contracts, so you can change your mind without a penalty. Consumer Cellular runs around $25+ fees, and Jitterbug is under $20+ fees.

Grocery delivery and ride services too expensive for you? Again, a family member or friend could set up the accounts for you and have the service charged to their credit card.

Peace of mind for loved ones? Those who may worry about you feel a lot better knowing that you aren't out on icy sidewalks, lugging groceries around, getting good hot food, etc. This is something tangible they can do for you. You don't have to use the apps, but they can be there for times when they might be useful.

Where Are They Now?

▲ Nancy LaVerda was recently in Southern California where she visited the bluffs at Carpenteria and the Santa Barbara harbor.

- In October, Jane Cave and Eugene Versluysen spent three weeks visiting family in London and Milan and enjoyed the sights in Rome, Bologna, and Turin. Along the way, they had plenty of opportunities to indulge their passion for photography. This pic is an unexpected street scene in Rome.
- Thanks to the DCV's Gala silent auction, Ken Shuck and Carol Galaty stayed at Lex Rieffel's cabin in Woodville, VA and hiked in Shenandoah National Park. The picture is the two atop of the Hawksbill Summit which is the highest view point in the Park. Carol reported that the hiking is stony and steep but the leaves and views are spectacular and the crafts fantastic.

Where Are They Now?

▲ Kathy Price spent Thanksgiving with her family in New York City. Her sons are Photoshop pros — there are no triplets in her family — just two dogs, three kids and a son-in-law.

▲ In September Frank Della-Penna invited five hula dancers from China to attend the Hawaiian Steel Guitar festival in Fort Collins, Colorado. The China Dance Hula Studio is the only group teaching and performing Hawaiian dance in China.

▲ Lucia Edmonds and her niece June were in Paris at Iris and Irv Molotsky's apartment over Thanksgiving week. The photo with four people includes my niece (far right) me and the daughters of one of my best friends growing up, Daniella and Valentina. Daniella stayed with me for a couple of summers but I hadn't seen her since she got married some 30+ years ago.

Out & About with DCV

The last joyful event connected with the 2018 Gala took place took place on November 2, even as plans for the 2019 gala are beginning to unfold. Villagers Eileen and Michael Tanner and Audrey and Sheldon Katz, winners of the Chinese Cooking Class offered at the 2018 Silent Auction, gathered at the home of teacher Iris Molotsky with knives and cutting boards and ready for action.

The Chinese chefs-in-training learned three traditional Chinese cooking styles: shrimp stir-fried in a wok, Sui Mai dumplings cooked in bamboo steamers, and deep-fried egg rolls. After a brief introduction about where to buy authentic Chinese ingredients and a demonstration of how to chop and dice (not timidly) the kitchen became a clanging beehive of vigorous activity. Each person participated in every step of every recipe thereby learning and experiencing new techniques, including cooking with woks. Learning new cooking styles was paramount, but the mood in the kitchen was relaxed and the banter contagious—especially after each dish was successfully completed.

After the three dishes were done, the final step was sitting down to lunch—a Chinese feast of our own making. The four new chefs, joined by teacher Iris and her husband, Irv, enjoyed a wonderful Chinese meal that was very special. The meal ended with tea, almond cookies made by Iris, and lots of laughter.

After much discussion about the shortage of the shingles vaccine on the DCV list serv, DCV swung into action and decided to host its own vaccination clinic. Board Member Ann McFarren made the calls and our local Giant Food agreed to help us out and hold a private clinic in the comforts of the DCV office. DCV vaccinated 40 members. A huge thank you to Dr. Sydney Wang, Giant Food Pharmacy Manager who administered the vaccinations.

Partnering with the Women's National Democratic Club, Dorothy Marschak helped organiz the Anacostia connection series — "Social Entrepreneurship in Anacostia". Dorothy is posing with Kymone Freeman, the co-Founder of We Act Radio and the Community Bookstore (soon to partner with Andy Shallal's bookstore in his new Anacostia Busboys and Poets), That's the only exciting place she's been this year, aside from GW Hospital.

DCV continued its annual tradition of preparing and delivering Thanksgiving meals to members who asked for one. Huge thanks to the Turkey Crew — Ted Mann, Annie Groer, Larry Stuebing, Lois Berlin, Harvey Friedman, Jeanne Downing, Eva Lucero, Sandra Yarrington, Ann Talty, Marcy Logan and Abigail Wiebenson.

Turkey Croquettes

Every Thanksgiving for the last six years we have gotten our turkey at Glen's. I get a large, fresh turkey regardless of whether we are feeding 6 or 16! I LOVE leftovers. This year we got a 21 pound turkey and had 6 folks, counting Larry and me, at the table!!

Needless to say, we had lots of leftover turkey. I really don't care, because one of my favorite things to make with leftover turkey is turkey croquettes. I basically make a thick white sauce to make them, wrap them individually in Saran Wrap and put them in the freezer. On those nights when I don't feel like cooking a thing that requires effort, I pull them out and put them in the oven, toaster oven or in a frying pan (with butter) until they crisp up. It's always a good thing! I realize you are probably done with leftovers by the time this newsletter comes out, but save this one for next year or get a turkey breast and try it out! This recipe also works with leftover chicken.

Ingredients:

5 cups diced turkey 1 stick of butter 1 cup of four

Salt, pepper and seasonings to taste (I use a lot of cayenne because we like spicy and hot!!) 2-2¹/₂ cups chicken broth (or turkey broth if you have it)*

Directions

Dice your leftover turkey into 1/4 to 1/2 inch dice. Then it's time to make your white sauce. Melt the butter in a heavy saucepan, add the flour and whisk it into the flour until you have a thick roux. Cook this roux for about 2-3 minutes and add the seasonings you want to add. Add your broth a cup at a time and whisk briskly. You want a really thick sauce - beyond gravy texture!

Once your sauce is thick, take it off the heat and let it cool to room temperature. Mix the cooled sauce into the diced turkey and refrigerate for about 1/2 hour. Once cooled, take handfuls of the mixture and make patties the size you would like, place it on Saran Wrap and wrap it up-I take a square piece and place the patty in the middle, fold the Saran Wrap over from each side and then fold the two flap sides over. At this point, you can put them in the freezer or you can put them in the fridge to use within 2-3 days.

Judy Silberman, Yoga Master

Do you know there is yoga for fallen arches? Poor foot mobility can negatively affect posture and balance. So, for the next few newsletters, the yoga tips will encourage you to show respect and gratitude to your feet. Stand in your best Mountain Pose. Keep your feet hip-width apart and slightly pigeon-toed, which involves the inner thigh muscles for more leg strength. Using a wall or chair for support, rock back and forth on your feet, focusing your attention on the heels, balls, toes, outsides, and insides. Extend left leg back into runner's stretch, but keep both heels firmly on the floor, knees soft and not locked. Slightly bend the left knee down and up 4X, keeping your torso straight as a piston, with head facing front. Bring left foot forward and right leg back to repeat on that side. Your legs should feel tired, because you are using many of your leg and foot muscles, improving your strength, flexibility, posture, and balance! More next month.
